THE UNKNOWN GUEST. One pleasant evening in the month of June in the year 17-, a man was observel entering the borders of a wood, near the Hudson river; his appearance was that of a person above the common rank. The inhabitants of a country village would have dignified him with the title of "Squire."

day, he was about making such disposition of the saddle and his overcoat as wo'd combe him to pass the night with what comfort circumstances would admit, when he spied a light glimmering through the trees. Animated with hope of better lodgings, he determined to proceed.

The way, which was steep, was attended with more obstacles the farther he ad vanced; the soil being composed of clay, which the rain had rendered so soft, that his feet slipped at every step. By the utmost perseverance, this difficulty was finally evercome without any accident, and he had the pleasure of finding himself in front of a decent looking farm-house. The watch-dog began barking, which the river, his illustrious visitor had persuation for conveying the horse across the river, his illustrious visitor had persuation for the does.
